~ Note from Mrs. Johnson (djohnson@cornerstoneschool.us) ~

On Friday, I overheard this comment, "I think my eyes are going to hurt after today." This was in reference to all the patterns that had to be looked at all day. There was a good demonstration of school spirit last week! This week Tuesday we are going to welcome a visitor to our classroom for Science. Mr. Chase from down the hall is going to share his knowledge of rocks and minerals with us. He also has a great collection of rocks that we get to admire. Thanks so much Mr. Chase for spending some of your time with us!

Here are the rest of the plans.

Bible: Meeting with Melchizedek and the Covenant with Abram Gen 14,15

Birth of Ishmael Gen 16,17

~~ Note from Miss Willis ~~

PE: 80% chance of rain this afternoon? Hopefully that doesn't stick around all week...but if it does, we'll move our soccer games indoors. Be prepared for either option!

Grade 7/8

~~ Note from Mr. Houweling ~~

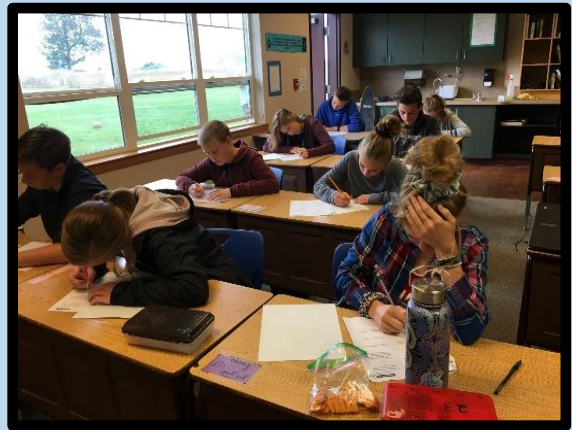

If someone asked you to give a dictionary meaning on the term English, how would you respond? (Actually, this applies to any language!) We thrashed that one around this past week and came up with: "English is a communication tool that has a system of rules to enable the communicator and recipient to code and decode one's inner thoughts. It means to commune from heart to heart." It's what God has done with His Word!

Our weekly Friday assessments are progressing well. Kudos to the grade 7s. They're being diligent in keeping up with the homework tasks and studying for assessments. It's hard work, but they're doing well. The workload is nothing new for the 8th grade! However, some have taken a relaxed start to the year and as consequence their grades have suffered! For the most part, it's wondering to see students absorbing and mastering the necessary knowledge and skills. We've been closely examining the use of vivid and sensory terms in our writing, and trying to eradicate certain vocabulary, such as "got", "gotten", "getting" "and then", etc. These are words that we tend to use if we're adopting a lazy attitude to our writing! Being expressive takes conscious thought; it means we need to step outside the box of traditional thinking and come up with words and phrases that's going to invoke such a response in our audience that they're going to want to read more of our works! We're hoping to put together a book of short stories later this year ☺

Here are some noteworthy things for the week ahead:

Homework Due:

- Tuesday:
 - o Spelling Portfolio reflection assignment
- Friday:
 - o Memory verse
 - o Bible Test
 - o Math Test

Have a blessed week, S Houweling

~~ Note from Miss Willis ~~

Social Studies: Wow. We've flown through the chapter on the Mongols and have our test this week Friday. That means you should start studying today! If you want to check in on some things we've talked about in class, it would be great to discuss with your son/daughter why we study Eastern history. It's not our history, culture, or religion...so what's the point? Hopefully they have lots to say!

PE: Soccer all week! With practice today, a game tomorrow, and PE on Wednesday and Thursday, there will be a lot of soccer this week! Which should mean everyone is super hydrated for the next few days...
